University & College Missions

MSU Vision: “We believe that a diverse campus is critical in order for our students, faculty and staff to be engaged and productive members of a global society.”

College of Arts & Humanities: “We are a community of learners committed to seeing, understanding, negotiating, and ultimately embracing difference.”

Importance of Cultural Competence

Communication is key to understanding others. Intercultural communication creates a bridge between groups of people to develop and expand on intercultural competency.

Key Terms

Culture: “the pattern of beliefs, behaviors, and values maintained by groups of interacting people, and passed to future generations” (Hammer & Bennett, 2010).

Intercultural Competency: “the capability to accurately understand and adapt behavior to cultural differences and commonality” (Hammer & Bennett, 2010).

Past Research

Students who completed a one-semester human relations course showed statistically significant positive gains in their orientation to cultures different than their own.

Investigators attributed these gains to:

- < Cultural partnerships
- < Service learning experiences
- < Mentor guidance
- < Reflective practice

(Sandell and Tupy, 2016)

Research Questions

What is the starting level of intercultural competency among undergraduate students in an Intercultural Communications course in the College of Arts & Humanities at MSU, Mankato?

Are there any differences in the starting levels of intercultural competency of undergraduate students in the College of Arts & Humanities compared to the students in other colleges at MSU, Mankato?

Developmental Model of Intercultural Sensitivity (Theory)

Hypotheses

The starting level for undergraduate students will be early in the stage of Minimization on the Intercultural Development Continuum.

There will be no statistically significant differences in the starting levels of intercultural competency among the students in different colleges at MSU, Mankato.

Methodology

Population: undergraduate students in A&H

Subjects: 20 students in an Intercultural Communications course

Setting: mid-size, mid-western, public university

Instrument: Intercultural Development Inventory

Procedures: on-line survey at start of the semester

Analysis: SPSS - descriptive statistics and tests of significance (t-tests)

Sample of 20 Students

N	%	Demographic Information
13	65.0%	Female
19	95.0%	18 – 30 years old
17	85.0%	US citizens
4	20.0%	Ethnic minority in home country
18	90.0%	Childhood in North America
15	75.0%	Never lived out of US

Conclusions

The starting level of intercultural competency among undergraduate students in an intercultural communications course at MSU, Mankato is ethno-centric minimization.

There is no statistically significant difference in the starting values of intercultural competency among undergraduate students in the 6 different colleges at MSU, Mankato.

Recommendations

We suggest further studies be conducted with larger samples to understand the relationship between instructional strategies that will foster intercultural competence.
