Title:

The March of Time, in cooperation with National Camp and Life Camps presents - Camping Education - a new and realistic program of purposeful living, outdoor experiences and community service.

Throughout the United States today _____ millions of American youth, ages 6 to 17, trudge their way to all kinds of schools, public and private, city and rural, in quest of what our democracy guarantees as their rightful heritage - free education. This education is carried on in all kinds of schools - the one room schools, four-room schools, elementary and secondary school buildings many stories high, having enrollments up to as many as 10,000 children in one building.

Well over 50% of American youth spend _____ hours a day, _____ hours a year in rooms, searching through books and reciting their lessons in these standard school buildings. For the most part they follow a standard curriculum.

Founded originally on the premise that education was a preparation for life, they learn standard things early in life just in case some day they may have need for them.

But in recent years some schools, both public and private, have ventured into the newer philosophy of education, introducing contact with the community outside by field trips in an effort to bring children into contact with some realities of life as an essential part of their education, for education is life itself.

Title:

The Camping Education movement was founded by National Camp, July 9, 1949, based in general upon the camping movement and in particular upon the unique and revolutionary type of campsite procedure and decentralization developed in Life Camps.

American schools stand today as one of democracies greatest accomplishments...a free education to all youth.

Twenty million American children trudge daily to these schools to prepare themselves for life in a turbulent world.

Encouraging in recent years has been the move to introduce more realism in education and give youngsters actual experience along with book learning.

Some schools, both public and private have introduced direct contact with life outside the school as a part of the curriculum so that during the school hours trips are taken to nearby places under teacher guidance.

But these instances are far too few and for the vast majority of youngsters school is still confined to books and within the four walls of the classroom where they learn standard subjects in a standard way.

Here the child meets the real things of life in their true perspective. How much more character, biology and physics will mean to a youngster who has a rich background of first-hand experience and how much of these subjects are learned as they should be, in relation to each other.
