A NATION OF IMMIGRANTS

Immigration has always been a "touchstone of democracy" for intense discussions of how deep and wide its roots have been one of the major themes of our history. This exhibition features a selection of documents from the United States National Archives collection relating to immigration and naturalization. These include 19th century immigration reports, a variety of new arrival tracking records, photographs of arrivals to Ellis Island, and recent congressional hearings on the threat of legal and illegal immigration.

For more information on the 19th and 20th century United States immigration collection, please visit the www.iaimn.org website. Contact information: Department of State, Office of Information and Public Affairs, Washington, DC 20520-5012.

A NATION OF IMMIGRANTS

Between the 1840s and the 1950s, millions of immigrants came to the United States. This exhibit features a selection of historical items that tell the story of immigration and naturalization. Items include 19th century immigration records, a variety of early immigration-related photographs of arrivals on Ellis Island, and recent Congressional hearings on the future of legal and illegal immigration.

This exhibit is sponsored by the Office of the United States Attorney General, Department of Justice, and the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services, Department of Homeland Security.

THE GREAT FEAR OF THE PERIOD
THE SINGLE MAN NOT AT THROTTLED BY PERSONS

The cartoon is a satirical attack on the immigration of single men, and is a warning of the danger that such men pose to the country. It is a warning to the government to take action to prevent such men from entering the country.
